Brian Straub provides adult individual counseling. His counseling style is a person-centered approach (PCA). The PCA is grounded in the assumption that people are able to create solutions to their own problems; when people are able to participate in a self-directed, non-judgmental, empathic, and genuine therapeutic relationship, their abilities to find solutions can be enhanced.

He has a bachelors and masters degree in social work and is an Arizona Licensed Clinical Social Worker (LCSW).

Brian provides EMDR, cognitive, and solution-focused counseling. These types of counseling have been shown to be effective in helping people cope with a variety of emotional and behavioral issues.
